a Life Young Explorer Holiday Enrichment Camp

Introduction

Excellent Results, Great Achievements, Brilliant Success etc.
It all begins with Survival Skills.

Apart from getting flying colours in academic performance, Survival Skills are also very important to your child with the increasing security and safety risks in the current world.

Survival skills help preparing your child in any unforeseen situations with high level of psychological and physical health readiness.

One of the main objective as a parent was to ensure the safety and the development of our children, getting them prepared to face the up and down before entering the challenging society. So lets do not neglect the non-academic Survival Skills that we have to offer.

Training Outline

Self-Help Skills in Daily Living

Besides the basic daily chores such as cooking or dressing, gaining your child's confidence of trying out new things and improving their self-esteem are equally important in developing their independence.

Emergency & Rescue in Life

To ensure the safety of everyone, the children will be briefed with examples of possible types of emergencies and their rescue plans. They will also learn about prevention measures, capable to identify and report in distress situations.

Surviving in Rural / Jungle

Children to learn life saving skills that they require to survive in a situation with minimum assistance and resources available.

The Quality and Value of a Survival

It is not only about the know-how of building a shelter or lighting a fire, but a strong mindset and the will to survive are the keys of survival. Real-life stories of survivors shared similar mental traits, enabling them to successfully overcome the respective difficult situations.

Simulated Survival Challenge

Children will be assigned with different missions at various difficulty levels in the rurals, applying their surviving skills with limited resources available.
